The Types of Government in Iran Approved by IOTM

IOTM believes in the following two forms of government for Iran in the post-IRI era:
Parliamentary Monarchy or Republic:

Parliamentary Monarchy

A form of government established under a constitutional system which acknowledges a hereditary or elected monarch as head of state who has been raised and well trained for the role of monarchy from birth, combined with a representative parliamentary democracy founded on total trust in the electorate.

Although the king or queen may be regarded as the government's symbolic head, it is the Prime Minister who actually governs the country as the chief member of the cabinet.

Republic

A form of government where the President of the Republic is elected by an absolute majority of the electorate votes, for a reasonable term such as 4-5 years.

The office of the President of the Republic (for example President and/or Vice President and/or Prime Minister) would have the executive power and would see that the Constitution is observed and ensure the proper functioning of the public authorities and the continuity of the State. The office of the President of the Republic would also be the guarantor of national independence, territorial integrity and observance of treaties, and would direct the operation of the Government and ensure the implementation of legislation.
